

She is creative department manager of an advertising agency ...

« Because my work consists of managing a group of wildly different personalities, and trying to get them to work in harmony, I have to deal with a lot of egos and work-related spats.

Freemasonry has provided me with a beautiful example of how to control my passions and how to work as part of a greater whole.

I'm then able to respond with calmness and a clarity I couldn't expect of myself before joining freemasonry. »
